

John F. Kennedy, "JFK On Our Nation's Memory," American Heritage, 1962"

There is little that is more important for an American citizen to know than the history and traditions of his country. Without such knowledge, he stands uncertain and defenceless before the world, knowing neither where he has come from nor where he is going. With such knowledge, he is no longer alone but draws a strength far greater than his own from the cumulative experience of the past and a cumulative vision of the future.” -

John F. Kennedy, “JFK On Our Nation’s Memory,” American Heritage, 1962